Last Chance! - Dippy: The World's Oldest Celebrity

Last chance to explore our special exhibit, Dippy: The World's Oldest Celebrity. Dippy leaves November 4th. This exhibit explores the cultural impact Andrew Carnegie's Diplodocus skeleton had on a global scale. A complete media sensation, casts of this animal can be found in some of the preeminent museums across the world including the French National Museum of Natural History, the Zoological Museum of the Russian Academy of Sciences and the Carnegie Museum of Natural History in Pittsburgh. Walk through the bones of the last original cast of Dippy while learning about its impact on science in the media, animation, and even world peace.
